FERN AND HIS APPOINTMENTS

The Mayor Tells Why He Made Them and Speaks of the Law.

Editor Advertiser.—I find that a great many people have an entirely wrong idea of the appointments made by myself under Section 146 of the Municipal Act in December. I find that many people think that I appointed practically every employee required in carrying on the public service of the city and county, including road laborers and other minor employees. Even W. O. Smith, judging from his letter in the Advertiser on Saturday, and from reports of his remarks at the Central Union meeting Friday night, seems to have this impression.

As a matter of fact, the appointments I made numbered relatively only a small number of the entire public service of the city and county, and for the most part were such appointments as were necessary to be made in order that the property of the city and county might be protected and the public service of the city and county go on without interruption.

For instance, I appointed Captain Berger bandmaster, but did not go into the personnel of the band at all. I appointed the chief and assistant chief of the fire department, but did not go into the personnel of the department further. In the county engineer's office, though the law seemed to require that I go farther in the matter of appointments, I only made two changes.
In the electric light and police, and fire alarm system, I only made two changes.
I appointed park keepers, because there was public property to be cared for and public service to be carried on, requiring the appointment of someone.
Foundrymen were appointed for the same reason.

Even in the road department, where the largest number of appointments were made, the great majority of them were necessary, to have some one with authority, at the time the city and county came into being, to care for the public property and to enable the public service in regard to road repairs, garbage collection, and street sweeping to go on without interruption. The city and county has livestock and road machinery in many different places, and it was necessary that this be looked after. The Municipal Act absolutely terminated the authority of county employees, hence there were stable foremen, road overseers and other like positions to be filled.

Where these considerations did not control, the act itself seemed to indicate that the appointments made should be made.

In all I named seventy-six men, a very large proportion of whom, including all but one of the heads of departments, and a large number of principal assistants, were Republicans. W. O.
Smith says that though he thinks I went a little too far in my appointments, that as to those whom I had the right to appoint the appointments were undoubtedly legally made, and though he thinks these should have been submitted to the Board of Supervisors, he says that they were undoubtedly authorized to take their positions at 12 o'clock noon on January 4. At least such is my understanding of his position. In any event, he denies that the Board of Supervisors has any appointing power under the Municipal Act. Yet, what have they attempted to do? They have attempted to give their committees practically unchecked appointing power, and these committees have actually undertaken to make at least two appointments for every one that I made, and among the whole lot there are very few—scarcely any—Democrats.

There can be no doubt, as Judge Kingsbury, W. R. Castle and W. O.
Smith at the Men's League meeting the other night all agreed, that the Legislature not only intended that the Mayor should have the entire appointing power, subject to the approval of the Board of Supervisors, but that it actually so enacted. That is the whole tendency of present day municipal legislation. In contending for that construction of the act, I am contending for what the Legislature intended, not for me, but for whomever the people should elect Mayor, not only for this term of the office, but for all succeeding terms, and whether such mayors should happen for the time being to be Democrats or Republicans.

Very truly,

JOSEPH J. FERN.

H. P. BALDWIN MAY UNDERGO OPERATION

H. P. Baldwin, the sugar magnate of Maui, became ill yesterday morning and a wireless message was received from Maui requesting that a surgeon be sent there immediately. The steamer Helene was chartered and Dr. Judd went to attend the sufferer. Accompanying him were relatives of Mr.
Baldwin. Dr. Judd went prepared to perform an operation for appendicitis, for it is this ailment Mr. Baldwin was reported to be suffering from.

HOW COUGHS AND COLDS ARE CURED IN BURMA.

The following letter from the Superintendent of the Municipal office at Mandalay, Mr. R. J. Stevens, shows that the method of curing colds in Burma is not unlike that used in almost every part of the civilized world.
He says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for several years and have found it most efficacious. I always keep a bottle of this remedy in the house." This medicine is as good for the child as for the adult and no family can afford to be without it. It is for sale by all dealers. Benson,

FINDS IDEAL CLIMATE HERE

San Diegan Capitalist Back After Touring South
Sea Islands.

After spending the past several months in touring among the islands of the South Seas and in New Zealand, Ranford Worthing of San Diego is back in Honolulu with the knowledge that for climate and opportunities Hawaii beats them all. Mr. Worthing will spend the next six months here at least, and may eventually decide to make Honolulu his home.

"After visiting here twice," he says, "I find that we San Diegans have been lying to ourselves about our climate for the last twenty years."

Mr. Worthing passed through Honolulu on his way south last year, having gone to look into the possibilities of establishing a colony of a couple of hundred families of farmers somewhere in the south. In this scheme he was associated with Dr. E. C. Rhodes, now of Maui, who came here some time ago, made a turn at Wahiawa, saw more opportunities and wrote to his partner to come back to Hawaii.

"He told me that he thought the chances for making money here were better than anywhere else just now," explains Mr. Worthing.

During his journey through the south, however, Mr. Worthing found much that pleased him. He found a wife in New Zealand and his Honolulu visit this time is a honeymoon one.
Naturally he has decided that his trip has been a lucky one for him, even if he founded no South Sea colony nor invested in the copra isles.

In a political way, however, New Zealand failed to come up to his expectations. "I had heard it called the land without a strike," he said, "but I found some good ones going on while I was there. It is true that the strike leaders were promptly arrested and fined by the government, but they paid their fine and said it had been worth the price."

"The ideal New Zealand system of government died with the death of Premier Seddon. Now there seems to be a tendency to recede and the country is drifting back into the hands of capitalists again. Sir Joseph Ward, who succeeded Seddon as Premier, took up the burden of carrying out Seddon's plans, but at heart he is not in sympathy with them and the land-grabbing opposition is making great headway against the government. Before long the opposition will be in power and then the country will go back to where it was twenty-five years ago. Then it will be 'Goodbye, New Zealand.'"

"There seem to be some great opportunities in the Fijis. There all the land is held by the government in trust for the natives, and the governing people are anxious to have white settlers come in. You can get long leases on as much land as you want, from one hundred to sixty thousand acres, for ninety-nine years, at an initial rental of sixpence per acre, gradually increasing to a shilling an acre, with easy improvement conditions."

"On Samoa nearly all the lands are taken up. I spent some time there and had a magnificent chance to see the volcano of Savaii in eruption. It was the most spectacular sight I ever saw in my life and I am afraid that old Mauna Loa will have to take a back seat to Savaii. There is the same old feeling of unrest in Samoa, however, and the same old rivalry between the two native kings. The natives there are expecting and looking forward to an uprising at any time."

"I am not certain about my stay here. I will stay for some months, at any rate. It seems to me, looking on as a possible investor, that there is too much local money here for an outsider to have much chance at the good things. If there were not so much money loose it would bring in outside capital and fresh blood and I think that that is what these Islands want."

THE SUPERVISORS TRY TO BRACE UP

such disapproval," though there is nothing to prevent the committee from repeating the operation the next month, and each succeeding month as long as the city has any money or credit left.

The third part of this trilogy of curative acts was introduced by Supervisor Kane, in the shape of a tonic and aperient resolution by which the Republican majority of the board resolved "that all the acts and proceedings done or had by the Board of Supervisors" at the meetings held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week "are adopted, ratified and confirmed."

The ordinances were read a first and a second time, the Mayor ruling that the first and second readings must be on different days, but being himself overruled by a vote of five to one, Logan putting the motion. The omnibus resolution, by which it was attempted to cure all defects in previous proceedings, was also carried by a vote of five to one, Logan putting the motion.

In the early part of the meeting a communication was received from the Mayor announcing that he had appointed S. R. Jordan examiner of chauffeurs, and asking the board to approve the appointment. Jordan was the examiner of chauffeurs under the county board, but his commission expired with the county. The question was raised whether Jordan was an American citizen and eligible for the position, and the matter was referred to a special committee, consisting of Aylett, Ahia and Quinn, to find out.

The board adjourned to meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight.
